PROGRAM DESCRIPTION

The Associate in Science degree in Construction Management is designed for students who are interested in pursuing a baccalaureate or a professional degree in construction management as well as students preparing for career entry positions. This program will prepare students for supervisory and management positions in the construction industry. The curriculum combines basic fundamentals with key courses in applied management, engineering, design, and business that are required to manage complex construction projects.

Construction Management courses for this degree are offered on-line through our program partner Dakota County Technical College. All general education courses are offered online, on-campus or hybrid through Minnesota North College.

PROGRAM NOTES

Students intending to transfer to a Minnesota State university are advised to consult with an advisor from that university for the best options for the general education MNTC elective courses.
